are destroyed each season as they appear, they will eventually become as destructive and as thorough a nuisance as the potato bug. A good way to destroy caterpillars, is to take a pole and it is a rag on the one end so as to project beyond the end of the pole some three or four inches, then dip the rag into carbon oil and saturate the nest and the forks of the limbs where they frequent. They can't stand the oil. It kills them speedily.

Notes of Fashion.—Jet necklaces and rubber jewelry are again in style.

The man who sells patent rights al-ways makes money; the man who buys, neeer does," is an axiom among patent right men, and it is from the fact that no patent worth working is for sale; the worthless ones are all that are of-fered to the public. Farmers who con-template purchasing should keep the above facts in view.
